Historic High of Million People Reached in One Day through Global Media Outreach Internet Ministry Presents Gospel to Over 1.5 Million People in One Day

CAMPBELL, Calif., March 29, 2011 – Silicon Valley-based Internet ministry Global Media Outreach (GMO) reached an unprecedented number of people with the Gospel on March 24 and 25, 2011. For the first time, over 1 million people in one single day visited GMO's gospel websites and more than 1.5 million visited on March 25.

Over 255,000 people indicated decisions for Jesus Christ on Thursday and Friday. For both days combined, GMO online missionaries responded to 29,530 email requests for follow-up.

This historic event reaching over 2.6 million people in two days resulted in more people seeing the Gospel in a single day than all of GMO's history. Daily live results of people visiting the sites is available at <http://www.GreatCommission2020.com>.

"What we see happening is a spiritual hunger across the entire earth which may be affected by unanticipated world events such as those in Japan and the Middle East," said Walt Wilson, GMO's Founder and Chairman. "Given the effects of earthquakes, tsunamis, nuclear radiation, and dictatorships being overthrown, these are turbulent days. We're still not even close to reaching all the people now looking to know more about Jesus Christ."

In preparation for the Million Day event, Global Media Outreach began a program to increase the number of online missionaries available to respond. GMO now has over 6,200 trained online missionaries based on site, language and interest, ready to respond to seekers and recommitting believers coming to the sites. New and recommitting believers coming to the sites are offered opportunities to begin discipleship with an online missionary mentor. GMO also provides online Bible studies and online community to encourage spiritual growth with the ultimate goal to get these believers connected to a local church community.
